

To have an electric bike, one has to have a place to store it – I store mine under this building. The women at the table are playing mahjong – it's their favorite pastime – they stop long enough to say "hi".

Me with my bike...this day I walked it almost an hour to meet a friend to get it repaired...they were waiting on me with a refreshing Coke! I am grateful for kind friends who help me navigate the daily language challenges. The sunglasses are not for "coolness" but to keep all the rocks, bugs, and dust out of my contacts when I'm flying downhill.

I met Phoebe in China four years ago – she's grown so much and is an excellent back seat driver!
“Hopie,” Phoebe’s little sister, patiently waiting for my bike to be upgraded.

Family bike riding adventure!

Seeing English in another country can be entertaining. After getting my bike fixed, we had pizza delivered from this Pizza place...it was actually pretty good. Just thought you'd like to see how others apply our language.

I noticed this secure storage "facility" directly above the bike repair shop. Now, this is taking security to a whole new level. Right across from my "flat" (apartment) there's more storage!

Our Classroom Zoo Trip

Our "Zoo Trip" was a smash hit – we had a blast! We took an imaginary bus with very squeaky brakes to the zoo, visited animals that we had to search for, then fed them food they like to eat. For all who responded to my question about what to feed a cat, thanks!! We certainly had fun with that one. We fed cats the following four items: Cheetos, Peanut Butter, Bugs, and Cat Food. The list of what you sent me as ideas was included in the email. Thanks again for be a part of a huge success!!
