

What is your worth?

Do you ever wonder what you are worth?

Recently I read about John Odom, a baseball player for the independent Calgary Vipers, who was traded to the Laredo Broncos for 10 maple baseball bats. That's enough to give anyone an inferiority complex. It turns out there was more to the story. Calgary had to trade Odom because he could not get clearance to work in Canada. The bats were individually numbered and sold to the Ripley's Believe It or Not organization. They raised 10 thousand dollars for charity. So, Odom was worth more than it first appeared. Aren't we all worth more than we think?

How many times have you valued yourself based on others thoughts of you or even worse you have evaluated your worth based on how you view others. Jesus told us not to compare ourselves one with another. He made each of us unique.

When he called your parents to become missionaries he did not just call them- he called your entire family. He has equipped all of you with callings and gifting that will impact the people of the country that you are called to serve. YOU can and will make a difference.

I recently talked to an MK that was struggling in her country. She had reached out to try to be involved in a new area of ministry and felt that she was not needed. I encouraged her to reach out in other areas. GOD has called each and every one of you. There ARE people there that you can touch and effect. Even when you feel invisible or that you are not helping- YOU cannot value your own worth- just like John Odom- your value can't be counted. HE has great things in store for you!

God has something new in the horizon for you. "For I know the plans I have for you." Declares the Lord, "plans to...give you hope and a future."
