

Once upon a time...

By bicycle, by foot, village by village. Nothing stopped John Balca. He spread the beautiful Truth as it is meant to be spread, liberally, with authority and wisdom.

His field was his homeland, Yugoslavia. It spread to include Czechoslovakia, Hungary, France.

His work was simple; start churches, bring people to salvation and encourage saints. His results were so great, the world still acknowledges him today.

Not so long ago...

His unique burden was passed to his youngest son, Samuel Balca who did not have peace until he returned from Canada to his homeland. There, in the heart of Europe, he started his life's work, building on that of his father's.

God's tapestry continues to unfold, revealing its golden threads woven by a divine hand. A hand that sees the past and the future and interlaces the two until all we can do is stand in awe of the brilliance.

What John Balca started and Samuel Balca continued must not die now. Sweat, blood and tears have watered the soil of Yugoslavia. Are the millions of souls that are left untouched not to hear the hope of the Gospel?

God does not think so, for in a Serbian town, in the poor home of a drunk father and an unstable mother, God shone this hope and dreams into the heart of a lost and angry little boy without anyone uttering a word.

This boy, Radovan, was eventually invited to church and came to marry an apostolic girl, Tanya Balca. God took these two shining threads, one of an abused life now made whole, and the other the third generation of missions in Eastern Europe and is now weaving them into the living tapestry of His kingdom.
